This lizard is riding inside the tractor's rim, the part that connects the tire to the axle.

A green, rim-riding stow-away

- Some farmers prefer red tractors, some green. But they all agree that the two do not mix!
- Farmer's vehicle with an identity-crisis
- A wagon's caster
A caster is another name for a wheel. Wagons went out of use with the availability of tractors.
- Inappropriate Irish head wear
A leprechaun is a type of fairy in Irish folklore. It is not commonly worn by a farmer!
- A mixed-up, cold-loving, dressed-up bird
Penguins are found in the Antarctic, not on a South Dakota farm! Their unique coloring makes them look like they are wearing a tuxedo!
- The Jamaican flag
This X-shaped design belongs to Jamaica.
- An eight-armed creature of the sea
"Octo" means "eight"; the number of arms an octopus has. Though they may seem like legs, they are classified as arms!
- A colorful implement
An implement is a tool. Tractors pull disks, planters, sprayers and wagons, but not crayons!

- A rodeo mount
A mount is any animal that can be ridden. Bulls may be ridden in a rodeo, but not for long!
- An angelic young bovine
A bovine is another name for a cow. This one has angel-like wings!
- A flightless African fowl
Ostriches cannot fly because their body is too big for their wings.
- Giant party food transport
Flatbed wagons like this one are usually used to haul bales of hay, not giant cakes!
- Canned food container
Although they look like clouds, these scoops of ice cream are flying high.
- Floating frozen dessert
- Hard candy on a stick
Another yummy treat, another use for corn. Corn sugar can be found in lots of candies.
- Lucky for us they went extinct 65 million years ago.
